Play writing competition 2022

Information for entrants

Calling all budding playwrights and Shakespeare wannabes!

The Wateryard Group are announcing an exciting new playwriting competition for new and amateur writers young and old. There are different categories for writers aged 8 upwards.

The aim is to perform the winning plays in the Spring of 2023. We hope this will be as a full performance; but if health and safety guidance does not permit, then a rehearsed reading will be performed instead.

Judging Panel

We will be announcing our Judging Panel shortly – keep watching this page!

Judging process

The Judges will select a short list of 10 entries from each age category, from which 1 Winner and 2 Runners Up will be awarded per category.

Tips on Formatting and Play Length:

Estimates of stage time will be approximate, as much depends on the speed of the dialogue – is it quick witter banter or slow and tense, with lots of pauses? So, with that said, what's the best way to approximate the length of your play?

Page count: The most common way of estimating is page count, with the usual approximation being one minute per page. The basic flaw in this is that it assumes that everyone uses a standard page layout.

So, if you are using this way of estimating length, it is important that you format the play correctly.

Here is a guide on how we would like you to format your plays:

Word count: The other way to estimate play length is using a word count – generally 100 to 200 words per minute.
